

Linda Truitt, Ph.D.

Linda Truitt, Ph.D. is a Senior Social Science Analyst at the National Institute of Justice, U.S. Department of Justice. Dr. Truitt manages NIJ's criminal court research portfolio; research interests include: veterans and other problem-solving courts, prosecution and defense, diversion and criminal court adjudication. She also coordinates NIJ's drugs and crime research portfolio across social, forensic, and technology science offices. Those research interests include drug trafficking, markets, and use relating to heroin and other opioids, marijuana, methamphetamine, etc.

Dr. Truitt holds a B.S. in Psychology from Fordham University, an M.A. in Applied Social Psychology from George Washington University, and Ph.D. in Social Ecology (Criminology, Law and Society) from University of California, Irvine.